Current

- 2023 – 2028 K01AI177102 NIH/NIAID (Zivich PN, PI), Combining sources of information to improve HIV pre-exposure prophylaxis, Principal Investigator
Antiretroviral pre-exposure prophylaxis is an important tool for HIV prevention, with recent trials assessing new drug combinations. The limitations of clinical trials will increasingly require novel quantitative methods to reliably evaluate new interventions. The proposed study will use data from randomized trials, as well as novel methods, to address challenges in evaluation of new pre-exposure prophylaxis combinations.

Completed

- 2021 – 2023 T32AI007001 NIH/NIAID (Adimora AA, PI), Training in Sexually Transmitted Diseases and HIV, Postdoctoral Trainee
Provide training to doctoral students and postdoctoral fellows, including physicians, to create a cadre of young scientists with the skills in basic science, clinical medicine, epidemiology, and behavioral science to reduce the impact of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV infection.

2018 – 2021 T32HD091058 NIH/NICHD (Aiello AE & Hummer RA, MPI), From Biological to Social Processes: Interdisciplinary Training in Life Course Research, Predoctoral Trainee
 Provide integrated social and biological/health sciences research training to junior scientists to better identify, understand, and produce new knowledge on the social and biological pathways to health across the life course, thereby identifying novel points of intervention to improve health and reduce health disparities.
